A Legacy of Public-Private Partnership

During the last 15 years, New York City’s approach to public-private partnerships has contributed new models for private sector and philanthropic participation in city life.

The growth in the number and types of public-private partnerships in NYC has been supported through the development of a robust infrastructure – to help marshal private support and coordinate it with government needs.

The result has been a proliferation of public-private initiatives where we see private partners collaborating with city government in ways that push new boundaries and allow government to embrace an entrepreneurial spirit.
A Robust and Diverse Infrastructure

The public-private infrastructure that has evolved in NYC includes a number of coordination and facilitation bodies that provide expert management to optimize collaboration between public and private stakeholders.

There are many similarities but also many distinctions:

- Building Healthy Communities
Communities Putting Prevention to Work

CDC-funded program to develop and implement policy, systems, and environmental changes in community and school settings designed to increase physical activity, improve nutrition, and decrease smoking and exposure to secondhand smoke.

FPHNY role was fiscal/grants and contract administration.

FPHNY mobilized grant start-up activities by adding 68 staff and issuing 150 contracts in the first six months.
Nurse-Family Partnership

A program where registered nurses work with low-income, first-time mothers throughout pregnancy and the child’s first two years of development.

FPHNY role is fiscal/grants and contract administration, fundraising, and incubator.

FPHNY has raised over $7 million from multiple private funders for innovative enhancements to the national model for greater reach and impact.
Primary Care Information Project (PCIP)

PCIP works to improve population health and the quality of care in underserved communities through the use of health information technology and data exchange. PCIP supports the adoption and use of prevention-oriented EHRs among primary care providers.

2015 and Beyond

Expanding FPHNY’s Role and Value

1. Communications – visibility/messaging
2. Convener – collaboration with multiple partners across sectors
3. Create a Prevention and Wellness Trust in NYC
As an independent nonprofit:

- What is the potential for FPHNY to reach different audiences?
- Will certain audiences hear FPHNY’s messaging differently?
- Can we help DOHMH achieve behavior change with our communications capacity?
- Can we help DOHMH garner support for policy change?
- Can we promote our image to improve our own fundraising?
FPHNY As A Convener

We play this role to convene:

🛠 Funders with a particular focus around relevant public health issues;

🛠 City agencies whose activities and mission have a relevance to health (parks, public housing, criminal justice, e.g.)

🛠 Businesses to engage them in public health activities

Two-way conversation:

🛠 What can we/DOHMH help you with?
🛠 How can you help us/DOHMH?
Create a Prevention and Wellness Trust

Exploring a model similar to Massachusetts Prevention and Wellness Trust Fund to enable community groups to receive grants, mini-grants, technical assistance, and support to engage in health activities.

Source of funds:

- Community benefits funds from hospitals
- Grants from foundations with a community capacity or civic engagement focus
- Donations from businesses in a particular community or with a specific interest
- Private donations
