

WED., JUL 11, 2007

Wisconsin State Journal

High Today:
77
FULL FORECASTTEMPORARY
DELIVERY
STOP

FRONT PAGE

LOCAL

SPORTS

OPINION

COLUMNS

ENTERTAINMENT

BUSINESS

BLOGS

FORUMS

LOCAL

E-MAIL STORY

PRINT STORY

WED., JUL 11, 2007 - 12:12 AM

Report: State gets B- in health

By DAVID WAHLBERG
608-252-6125
dwahlberg@madison.com

Wisconsin gets a B- in health but a D in health disparities in a new report that highlights problems such as infant mortality among blacks in Milwaukee.

"Wisconsin is doing well overall in health, but there are unacceptable" gaps among racial, geographic, gender and educational groups, said Dr. Pat Remington, director of the UW Population Health Institute.

"Wisconsin can do a better job of making sure all groups share in health," Remington said.

The report was funded by the Wisconsin Partnership Program, a $300 million fund at the UW School of Medicine and Public Health created after the nonprofit Blue Cross and Blue Shield became a for-profit company.

A follow-up report next year will offer recommendations to improve Wisconsin's health, said Dr. David Kindig, an author of the new report.

Researchers based the grades on mortality rates and surveys in which people said how many days in the past month they were physically or mentally ill. To determine the grades for health disparities, data among various groups were compared.

OTHER STORIES

- Coroner: Body is Nolan's
- Assembly OKs its version of budget
- Testimony is mixed at Humphrey hearing
- Delivery of new trash bins starts

ADVERTISEMENT

READER'S CHOICE

Democracy starts here.

Look here for the Wisconsin State Journal Reader's Choice poll, each weekday from 11 a. m. to 4 p.m. We offer up to five story choices each day and your vote decides what goes on the next day's front page.

Wisconsin State Journal

ADVERTISEMENT

A different approach led to Wisconsin's No. 1 ranking among states last month by the federal Agency for Health Research and Quality. That was based on the quality of care hospitals provide. A similar report by the Commonwealth Fund ranked Wisconsin's health-care system ninth.

Another recent ranking, by the United Health Foundation, put Wisconsin 10th in health status.

In the new report, in which Wisconsin scored a B- in health, 16 states fared better. They include Iowa and Minnesota, which received Bs. No state got an A.

Twenty states did better than Wisconsin's D grade in health disparities. They include Iowa, which got a B, and Minnesota, which got a B-.

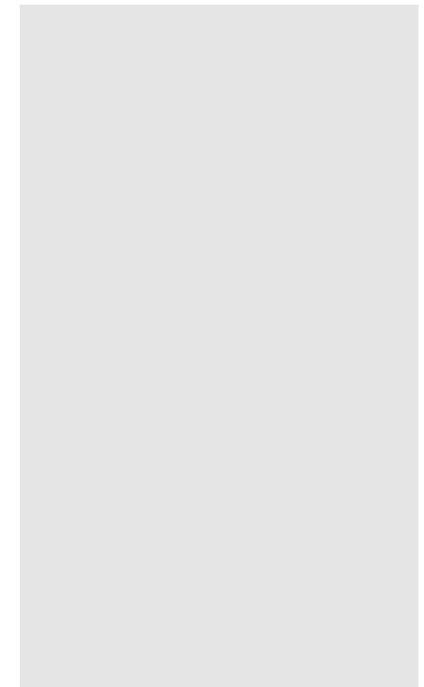

A major disparity in Wisconsin is infant mortality. Among blacks, 17.6 out of 1,000 babies die before their first birthday. That is more than three times the rate for whites, which is 5.1 per 1,000 babies.

Death rates remain high for blacks in childhood and later in life; the rates are also high for American Indians and Latinos.

Geographically, Milwaukee fared worst in health, with rural areas scoring better and smaller cities and suburbs ranking the best. Men died at higher rates than women in all age groups.

Remington said one factor examined -- educational status -- can be influenced. The infant mortality rate is lowest among people with college degrees, regardless of their race.

"You can invest in education," Remington said.

MOST VIEWED

- Coroner: Body is Nolan's
- UW football: Clay not ineligible yet, Bielema says
- Madison's young react to Nolan
- Unanswered questions: Police say they need to keep lid on information
- Photo gallery: Scene on Schneider Road

CONTACTS